YON HIELAN' GLEN.

The king is proud, an' he dines off plate,
Amang his courtiers braw.
He sits on a throne in royal state
Wi' gowd an' pearls an' a';
But I hae a throne I wudna gie
For ony he may ken—
A bonny green knowl, that waits for me
Adoon yon hielan' glen.

There, crooned wi' love, I sit at een,
Wha sae happy as I?
Wi' Jeanie beside me for my queen,
Watching the burn rin by,
I wadna' niffer wi' ony King,
Or envy mortal then,
The fleeting hoors nae weariness bring
Adoon yon hielan' glen.

I ask nae vintage o' aulden days
That freights gran' foreign ships;
There's a richer wine—beyond a praise
Brimmin' on Jeanie's lips.
I dinna want pearls or diamonds fine,
I want nae praise frae men;
Wi' Jeanie's true hart the warl is mine
Adoon yon hielan' glen.

THE GROWTH OF NEWSPAPERS.

A Few Items of Interest Gleaned from the Pages of the Directories.

The wonderful growth of American newspapers is shown by a comparison between the directories published in 1776 and in the present year. The one contains in its sixteen small pages a list of thirty-seven newspapers which were published in this country 110 years ago. The other is almost as large as an unabridged dictionary, and in its 2,000 pages contains the names of 14,160 newspapers and periodicals of all classes. Of this large list, only seven were found in the directory of 1776. The net gain of the year has been 666. The daily newspapers number 1,216, a gain of 33. There are about 1,200 periodicals of all kinds which presumably enjoy a circulation of more than 5,000 copies.

The increase in the rural weekly press, comprising about two-thirds of the whole list, has been most marked in states like Kansas and Nebraska. Kansas is also accredited with the greatest gain in daily newspapers. In Massachusetts the weekly press is growing, but magazines and monthly publications are losing ground. The tendency of this latter class seems to be toward New York city, as at least twenty-three monthly periodicals have been established here during the year.

Among the many newspapers published in this country, almost every social movement and industrial interest finds expression. A glance at the long list reveals many curious facts. There are about 700 religious and denominational newspapers, nearly one-third of which are published in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. New York is far ahead in this respect, while it will be a surprise to many to know that Boston is behind Chicago.

Three newspapers are devoted to the silkworm; six to the honey bee; thirty-two to poultry; eighteen to dentistry; and nine to phonography. There are three publications issued in the exclusive interest of postage stamp collectors, and one of dancers. The prohibitionists have 129 papers, and the liquor dealers 8. The organs of women's suffrage number 7, of candy makers 3, of gastronomy 3, and

The Fun of Collecting Specimens.

Reader, do you know the fun of collecting "specimens?" Do you know the pleasure of breaking into hard ledges of stone, to steal some secret of its structure? Do you comprehend the glory of knowing the names of these boulder stones and their history? how they were made; whence they have traveled, and what is their designation? Well, that is where science begins. Your boy comes home with his pockets full of stones. You wish he had thrown them at your neighbor's hens. But it is in this way that geology has its rise.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

The Thirteenth of the Name.

The baby monarch of Spain is the eleventh European sovereign who, in historical times, has been labeled with the questionable number thirteen. As his companions he has an emperor of Constantinople, a king of France, two kings of Sweden, and six popes of Rome.—Chicago Tribune.

Plays "Adapted from the English."

French and German managers have at last reached that stage appreciation when they are willing to advertise plays "adapted from the English."

A BATTLE-SCARRED RAT-CATCHER

Talks About the Habits and Peculiarities of the Pestiferous Rodents.

"Where do the rats come from," said the rat-catcher. "Originally from the sewer, and when the cellar floor is not made of cement or stone they are sure to get into the house. When the track is once opened they keep it well beaten. They go from the cellar all over the house. The lead pipes in the wall make excellent ladders for them to climb. They are excellent climbers. When a house is to be cleaned the pipes are greased, if they can be got at, so as to keep the rats in one part of the house. If this can not be done, then wire nets, with sharp-pointed sides, are hung directly near the holes. These tickle their whiskers, and when they raise the net and pass under it they can not get back to the hole. In this way they are all corralled in one place. It takes time, as they are cute, and some of the old fellows can not be led into any sort of traps. If there is anything in their way they will go a mile out of their course to get around it. When they get in places where I can not reach them with the tongs I generally shoot them with a small pistol. Some of the old fellows have a fancy of settling in the ceiling and are the hardest to get at. The best thing I know of with which to treat these obstinate citizens is a good dose of burning cayenne pepper. This suffocates them, if they get a large whiff at the start, and then the house suddenly becomes filled with sewer gas, which disappears as soon as the carcasses dry up and blow away. Rats breed rapidly, and if all of them are not destroyed they will quickly overrun a house again.

"Ever been bitten? A hundred times and more. The bite does not usually amount to anything. Rats have two motions of the jaw in biting. The first is soft and delicate, and the teeth just scratch the object they have hold of. Then follows a quick, sharp powerful action of the jaw, and the slender teeth sink up to the gums and stay there. This bite is dangerous; the first nip amounts to nothing. If the teeth have gone deeply into my hand I always suck the wound. This seems to keep the swelling down, but always a good deal of pain follows. My arm has swollen sometimes when a hungry fellow has given me a nip to twice its natural size. It's strange, but there is no harm in the bite of a well-fed rat. A frightened rat will fight, if cornered, and viciously, too. The way to grab rats so that they can not bite is to seize them with a strong grip just back of the neck. They will howl like stuck pigs, but can not get away and are entirely under control.

"I used to have ferrets to clean out houses, but gave them up long ago. They are too expensive and are difficult to handle, and if savage will bite worse than a rat. An extra number have to be kept on hand in training all the time, for when turned loose in the house where the rats are large one or more will be killed. They are just like rats in their habits and about the same size, and with a good-sized rat it is only a question of which gets the best hold first. Neither will let go. I have had ferrets' teeth fastened in my fingers, and their jaws were set so firmly that they had to be pried open with an iron bar.

"What is done with the rats? They are either drowned or sold to dog-fanciers, to train dogs to catch them, or for use in some of the sporting-houses at rat [illegible]. Some of the choice ones may get [illegible] the mysterious dishes served up in [illegible]t street, in the Chinese colony. The [illegible]usiness, however, is growing less every [illegible]ear. Every house has its own trap, and [illegible]n every shelf is a piece of some well-[illegible]dvertised rat poison. This is undermin[illegible]ng the business, and where formerly [illegible] could get $50 or $100 for keeping a [illegible]ouse clear of these mischievous visit[illegible]rs, I am glad now to do the same work [illegible]or $10 or $20. There are only three or [illegible]our professionals in the city. One of [illegible]hem still uses the ferrets, but he was [illegible]elling me the other day that he had so [illegible]ttle use for them that they die on his [illegible]ands."—New York Tribune.

The Five Kinds of Canal-Boats.

"There's five kinds of canal-boats," said an old boatman. "First there comes the 'bullheads.' They are those big canal-boats with a cabin over the whole deck. They won't carry any more dead weight than the others, but they are more roomy for light, bulky freight because there is more room between the keel and deck. Then comes the 'lakers.' This is a 'laker,' lake boat, some calls them. They are the big boats, with a cabin aft and table and bunks forward. Scows are canal-boats with the whole deck open and covered with leanto hatches like hot-houses, only there ain't no glass. They have a cabin aft and forward, too. They are the most profitable, because they load anything from coal to dry goods and fruit. The whole deck being open they load easy-like. Then there are 'lemon-squeezers,' them canal-boats cut in two in the middle so as to make two sections, so as to go easily into small locks on some canals. They are very few of them nowadays. The lumber boats are shallow and carry their loads mostly above deck. Some captains own only one boat, some two, and some three. Two boats is the best. We tie them together. When a man has three boats he ties them all together. It takes two mules to pull one boat and three to pull two. They put six and eight on three boats."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Treasure-Troves of Great Value.

Treasure-troves of great artistic value continue to be made in all parts of Europe. There is now on view in London a service of banqueting plate of a most interesting character, consisting of twenty-three circular bowls of hammered work, weighing 524 ounces, and bearing the London date marks 1581 to 1603. This plate originally belonged to Sir Christopher Harris of Radford, Devon, and after the assault on Radford by the Puritans in 1645 it disappeared until 1827, when it was turned up by a plow in a field near Radford. The plate is in fine preservation and will be offered for sale during the coming session.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Better Be Blind Than Deaf and Dumb.

Are not the blind proverbially cheerful, and is not this a beneficent, useful, and compensating quality in them? As a rule, we carry our cross gayly, and it is a constant source of wonder to many that we can keep up our spirits in face of the calamity. Contrasted with the deaf our bearing is remarkable; they are prone to look gloomy and morose, while we are, I think, usually the reverse. The secret is that it is far more depressing and miserable to live in silence than in darkness. As proof of this, watch a deaf person sitting apart with saddened expression and suspicious glance quick traveling in all directions. The whole aspect and demeanor of the man changes on the instant some one speaks to him in his own tongue—on the fingers, that is to say. The silence in which he lives is dispelled; he has found an equivalent for his ears.

Give, then, the blind man in his fingers an equivalent for his eyes and the darkness in which he lives is dispelled. His mood, if happy, simply becomes happier, in that he has an occupation, the source of all happiness. The situation is not changed if the occupation be directing or listening instead of technical. No; I must repeat this is a misunderstanding of the powers of the blind which has hitherto retarded their fullest development. They have been too much relegated to the ranks of the incompetent, too much set aside as a class by themselves, instead of being accepted as intelligent, useful, working members of the community.—Fortnightly Review.

The Black Man's Own Country.

It is only too certain that the emigrant is not wanted in the Cape colony. It is the country of the black man—of that scorner of clothes, the noble savage. White labor languishes; energy fails at the moment prospects open. The Boer, the most adhesive of mortals, rests contented with a squalid home and a prospect of untilled acres more extensive than his eye can survey. The true colonial instinct is wanting—that indescribable intellectual capacity of taking root where the foot falls. Ambition here seems to impel a man no further than a desire to obtain money enough to enable him, whether he be an Englishman or a German, to return home and stop there.

A posterity may arise that will be as the vine bush is, or the gum tree—a pure growth of South African soil, but with antecedents with a beginning in white hands. But down to the present moment the symptoms are not those of a colonization such as created a great republic across the western ocean, such as has builded an empire of cities and populous towns in the distant Pacific. I say it is a pity; for you cannot think of the mighty tracts of the green and beautiful country stretching in mountains and valleys and plains to the equatorial latitudes and of the dreadful poverty you see and hear of and read about in London and throughout Great Britain and Ireland without deep regret that the land should be universally declared to offer no opportunities to those in need of bread.—Cor. London Telegraph.

An Art-Student's Life in Paris.

A Detroit youth studying in Paris writes home: "The impressionist is not upheld, even ever so slightly, and a student cannot work as he likes. First of all drawings must be in charcoal—no crayons, pencils, or stumps are allowed—and the charcoal used here is hard, taking a very fine point like a pen. In making a study from life one must use charcoal paper, and your study must be finished without resort to rubbing flat shadows on patches of light and shadow made through any other means than the point. Thus you see your study is drawing at every stage, and you can not resort to tricks or accident. In drawing a head or the anatomy of an arm or leg one is taught by this means not only the use of a point, but he is instructed most accurately in actual movements of the muscles, tendons and bones; thus fixing in the student's mind with more certainty and more lasting effect the values of art lines and physiological construction. It is drawing in the true sense of the word, without any nonsense whatever.

"Student life does not seem expensive. On the contrary, it is proving quite reasonable. We get well-cooked dinners in most quaint and artistic little restaurants for 2 francs—40 cents of our money—and our studios cost us but $8 a month with coffee included, served each morning in our studios. Our school, our tuition, is $12 a month, and so you see one can live well here."—Exchange.

The Dog Did Not Count Seven.

It is one thing to think by resemblances and another thing to think by symbols. A story was recently published by M. Dubuc of a pointer which had learned after a few years that its master went hunting every Sunday, while on the other days he went to business; and M. Dubuc concluded that the animal had learned to count up to seven.

The conclusion is not legitimate; it may even be said to be wrong. The dog distinguished Sunday by some features that were peculiar to it—by the movements about the house, the behavior and Sunday dress of the servants, the dress of the master, or any one or more of a number of things that make Sunday different from other days of the week; but we may say without contradiction that it did not count seven. We, ourselves, if we were restricted to a life absolutely uniform, would not be able to distinguish the seventh day without mnemotechnic aids, and as a rule we seldom recollect the day or the date except by the assistance of intrinsic circumstances.—Popular Science Monthly.

Whale Fisheries of the Pacific.

Whale fisheries are established all along the coast of Oregon and California, and numbers of whales are taken in their migrations down the coast, while whales have been taken up north with harpoons in them belonging to San Diego and Monterey whalers.

It is singular that the post mortem of a character seldom reveals any shortcomings.—Whitehall Times.

—Man's Deceit and Woman's Credulity.—After an enthusiastic lover spends two hours' hard labor over a letter to his girl, and then mars its beauty by spilling a drop of ink on it, he first grumbles in a scientific manner for a few minutes, and then draws a circle round the blot and tells her it is a kiss: and she, poor thing, believes it.—*N. —"I have noticed," said a part young lawyer, "that members of the legal profession are almost always brave men. It is seldom that one shows cowardice. I wonder why this is so?" "Well," responded an elderly lady, "I've read somewhere that 'conscience makes cowards of us all.' And as lawyers mostly have no conscience, why of course they haven't any thing to make them cowards."—N. Y. Ledger.

A CELEBRATED CITY.

Some of the Sights of Venice, the Queen of the Adriatic.

This place is different from every other, and creates quite a new sensation. I had hitherto been accustomed to cars and busses, but here there is water everywhere. The highways are canals, and you glide along in gondolas instead of riding over macadamized roads. This is an ancient and celebrated city, containing many beautiful buildings and some rare art treasures.

St. Marks, which was begun in 800 and finished in 1071, is a remarkable building, as will be seen from this simple fact that it has, in and out, 500 columns and 42,000 feet of mosaic pictures of the most exquisite character. There is no paint anywhere; nothing but marble and mosaic. The latter, it is said, was 900 years in being finished. Each generation added its contribution to the work, and the result certainly is most striking. The grand altar is supported by alabaster columns, said to be brought from the Temple of Solomon. These columns are remarkable for their purity. There are many others brought from the mosques of Constantinople. The facade is Venetian Gothic, surrounded by the four celebrated horses brought from Nero's Temple, at Rome. The Grand Square is the busiest spot in all Venice. Arcades run the whole length on three sides, and are filled with fancy shops, cafes, etc. It is the fashionable promenade.

The Doge's palace occupies nearly one whole side of the square. It is in red and white marble, Venetian Gothic style, resting on thirty-six columns. I crossed the Rialto bridge, which connects Old and New Venice. At the end of the bridge, on the old side, is the square devoted to the money changers, and, appropriately enough, in the immediate neighborhood is the iron-barred house of Shylock. Among other features of interest are the Church of St. John and St. Paul, the Jesuit Cathedral, the Church of the Bare-footed Friars; the Hunchback, or Criminal Exposure, near to Shylock's house, where criminals were placed on a marble pedestal and exposed to the jeers and scoffings of the passers-by; the Bridge of Sighs, connecting the prison with the Doge's palace, which prisoners cross for trial, and many other objects too numerous to describe. I must observe, however, that Venice possesses the largest oil painting in the world, the work of Lintoretti. It has eight hundred figures, and took seven years' constant work to finish. In the immense profusion of artistic architectural and other riches in this fairyland of Italy, one gets almost dazed. The last gallery of pictures, or the last cathedral, seemed almost finer than those we saw first. But they are all so good, have so many beauties peculiarly their own, that I can only use the language of eulogy regarding the whole.—Venice Cor. Sacramento Bee.

Indian Ideas of Decorum.

We heard of a girl the other day who was "as wild as an Indian." But an Indian girl is not wild. No girl is more submissive to the rules of her race and tribe than an Indian girl who is not yet corrupted by the proximity of the white man. She never goes anywhere alone, and she never passes a man on the highway without turning away her head. If a man comes into her wigwam she conceals her face, and she does not stand within hearing distance of men who are talking. She lives up to her idea and her tribe's idea of what is proper and becoming. If she fails to do so, she places herself beyond the protection of her tribe. There is no safe place in the world for the girl who knows no law but her own will.—N. Y. Ledger.

FOR SHERIFF.

Elsewhere in our paper to-day will be found a card announcing E. Rogers as a candidate for Sheriff of Sonoma county, subject to the action of the Republican County Convention, to meet in Santa Rosa on Saturday, August 11th, proximo. Mr. Rogers is well-known to most of the voters of the county, having been in the mercantile business in Petaluma for many years, has many friends in every locality within the county limits, and should he be nominated by the Convention as the candidate of the party, he will be hard to beat at the general election. Mr. Rogers does not ask men to pledge him their support in the Convention, preferring that delegates shall go to the convention unpledged and prepared to support the most available man suggested by his friends in the body for the important position.

THE QUESTION of reorganization of the Supreme Court assumed a new phase on Thursday, proceedings being commenced for impeachment of Chief Juftice Morrieon and Justice Sharpstein, or dismissal from office by concurrent resolutions of both Houses; complaints being filed by Judge D. S. Terry before the Assembly, against each of said Judges, setting forth that since entering upon the duties of their offices they have become, by disease and old age, physically incompetent to perform their official duties and asking their dismissal from office. On the same day both Houses took up the matter and proceeded to consider it, with the probability of the concurrent resolution plan being adopted. If the facts set forth in the charges be true it would seem an act of necessity, in view of the importance to the people of the State of ridding the Supreme Bench of Judges who have, through senility or disease, become mentally or physically incompetent, though the course adopted may not be strictly in accordance with the letter of the law.

THE Legislature has been in extra session nearly two weeks and so far has done little more in the way of legislation than to provide for payment of the per diem and mileage of members and salaries of clerks and other attaches. The work of the session as laid out by the Governor in his call, is not taken hold of as though the body intended to accomplish the objects specified in the call, but members of both Houses enter into the spirit of electing a United States Senator with a hearty good will, only they pull both ways—one party trying to elect a Senator in place of Hearst, the other fillibustering to prevent action, even appealing to the Governor to issue his Proclamation appointing Tuesday next a legal holiday, to prevent a vote being taken on that day, in accordance with law.

THE Stockton "Democrat" has undertaken one of the biggest jobs in the newspaper line that we know of. In a recent issue it announces that: "It is the set purpose of this paper to politically kill and forever damn all incompetent and faithless aspirants to office within the gift of the people." The "Democrat" evidently expects to live a long and turbulent life.—[Sonoma Democrat.

Doubtless our big Santa Rosa contempoary speaks from experience; for it is true that its Stockton namesake has undertaken an herculean task that can never be accomplished until the fools are all dead and political "bosses" cease to exercise influence in nominating conventions.

ON Monday last President Cleveland returned the papers to the Department of Justice at Washington in the case of Watts, now serving a term in the California State Prison, for cruelty to sailors on board ship, denying the petition of said convict for pardon. In explanation the President relates that since approving the application for pardon a few days previous, he had received information satisfying him that it was not a case in which Executive clemency was justified.

FRUIT SALES EAST.

The prices which have been maintained for California fruits east of the Rocky Mountains this season, so far, under the management of the Fruit Union of California, seem to indicate a successful season for fruit-growers and promising good results in future years, when the Association has perfected its arrangements for handling the vast yield of fruits from the mountains and plains that are now being developed into fruit-raising zones, and the excellence of Pacific Coast fruits become fully known and appreciated by the people of eastern trade centers. Since the Fruit Union was formed fruit trains running on fast time, take freight at less than half the cost paid for shipments by the car on slow trains in former seasons, and rarely has there been losses reported upon perishable fruits by deterioration in transit. Shipments have also been regular and so distributed among the different points as to avoid a glut in any of the markets, thus regulating the supply at all points, establishing steady prices at remunerative figures and giving confidence to producers; thereby encouraging them to give greater attention to the improvement of the fruits raised, as well as care in picking and packing, that shipments may reach consumers in good condition. The satisfactory results of the operations of the fruit association ought to induce the viticulturists of the coast to form a similar association for the shipment and sale of their wines and brandies in the eastern states and foreign countries, with a view to a reduction of freights and commissions, and also to the maintenance of remunerative prices to the producer of the grape; and at the same time placing the articles in the hands of consumers at the lowest rates, justified with the cost of production and expense of shipping and handling in the markets. The products of the orchards and vineyards of California have rapidly gained in reputation at home and abroad for some years past, keeping pace with successful experiments of our intelligent viticulturists and horticulturists, encouraging them to continue efforts toward improvement, and we may reasonably hope in a few years more, aided by the excellence of our climate and the variety of California soils, to reach a degree of excellence of products that will place them in the markets of the world above the reach of competition. Experiments have proven that on this coast there are soils and climates suitable for the growth of almost every variety of products known to the Temperate Zone and that most of the tropical and semi-tropical products grow and mature here in great profusion and profit to cultivators in favored localities in nearly all sections of the State, and yet every year experiments develop the adaptability of soil and climate of our valleys and foot-hills for new products hitherto untried, that give promise of great profit to producers in future years.

REPORTERS IN LUCK.

The "Examiner" and "Evening Post," of San Francisco, each have enjoyed the felicity of having a reporter in their employ made a martyr of, this week, each suffering for the sake of "live journalism." In the case of the former paper Mr. Zechandelaar, the reporter, places himself in contempt of the Superior Court—Judge Sullivan presiding—and is in turn placed in durance vile, by order of the Court, for having reported and caused to be published the proceedings in the Hinkle divorce case, including the testimony, the case being tried with closed doors and secrecy being enjoined by the Court, as the testimony was of a nature deemed unfit for publication. The "Examiner" has resolved to try the legality of the Court's order and awaiting the issue—the reporter suffers. In the case of the "Post," on Tuesday last, the Senatorial correspondent of the paper and the paper itself, were ordered excluded from the reporters gallery and Senate Chamber for the remainder of the session. The offense was the publication of an article charging a number of Senators—named therein—with corruption in the receiving of bribes.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Warm Work in the Senate---Great Sensation in the Prospective.

Diligent Congressmen Early at Their Desks---Ruffian Tendencies in Members Developed.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, July 19, 1886.

Since it is understood that Congress must be prolonged into the dog days, the Senate proposes to make the remainder of the session as lively and as hot as possible. Something must be done during these torrid days to elevate proceedings into harmony with the thermometer. Preparations are being made for a heated political debate in connection with the vetoed pension bills. All Presidential veto messages from the organization of Congress to the present day are to be printed and sent to the Senate in a few days.

Several Republican Senators expect to make violent assaults upon the President, and one New England Senator in particular is making elaborate preparations for his speech. If he carries out his intention, that particular Senator will be attacked from the Democratic side and a great sensation is promised. It is said a case will be presented charging him with exacting from a widow $200 for procuring her pension since he came to Congress. That is a terribly grave charge. Senators and Representatives are forbidden by statute to receive a fee or gratuity for any service before the departments. The penalty for violation is not more than two years imprisonment in the penitentiary or not more than $10,000 fine, or both fine and imprisonment. They also render themselves subject to expulsion from Congress.

On these warm sultry mornings there are three Congressmen who can be found in their seats at 10 o'clock. That is considered a very early hour as the House does not convene until 12 M. These early birds are Warner of Missouri, Lyman of Iowa, and Ellsberry of Ohio. Regularly at that hour Mr. Warner may be seen at his desk with a pile of books before him. He seems to be the hardest student in Congress. But Mr. Lyman has more pressing business to attend to. His district has more pensioners and claimants probably than any other in the United States. Each mail brings him heaps of documents which he must put together and formulate into bills. In order to keep up with his work and retain the good will of his constituents, therefore, he has to be at his desk while his colleagues are at breakfast. Mr Ellsberry completes the trio who reach the House before the pages, and he makes use of the time by answering letters.

The tendency towards ruffianism in Congress has been quite marked of late. Scarcely a day passes that some member does not call another a hard name or utter some coarse threat. It was generally conceded a few days since, after the disgraceful encounter had occurred between Representatives Cobb of Indiana, and Laird of Nebraska, that it was time for the House to assert its dignity. The collision took place just outside the Hall of the House, and was the result of acrimonious words used in a side discussion of a questied then under debate. Both men had gone outside for the purpose of "fighting it out." Insulting language was exchanged and Mr. Laird, who is a young man, struck Mr. Cobb, who is about twenty years his senior, a severe blow. A ring on Mr. Laird's finger cut Mr. Cobb's face making it bleed, and but for the interference of friends, a rough and tumble fight would have ensued.

And then, later, the dignified Senate Chamber was the scene where two presidential candidates exchanged opinions of each other and of the sections they represent, which were anything but complimentary. General Logan wanted to increase the appropriations for several Illinois improvements and Senator Edmunds opposed it as unfair to other sections. Logan, with some warmth, retorted that Edmunds had got for Vermont more than her share, and was now fighting everything that Illinois asked for. Sarcastically he added that Burlington, Vt., was a much larger and more important place than Chicago.

Mr. Edmunds replied that as the Illinois Senator never told an untruth, Burlington must be larger and more important than Chicago. He accused General Logan of carrying chips on each shoulder and asserted that they have social order and execution of law in Burlington which do not exist in Chicago. This slur upon the Lake city aroused Mr. Logan's ire. Said he, "the people of Chicago are just as good as the Senator from Vermont; just as law-abiding and certainly they are not so pestiferous at home as he is in this body."

Pestiferous was felt to be a fearful word to use in connection with the dignified, reserved, astute, elderly Senator from Vermont, St. Jerome Edmunds as he is called, because his profile is said to resemble strikingly the pictures of St. Jerome. But the episode broke the monotony of business proceedings and the Senate indulged in a laugh at Logan's characterization.

The Sonoma "Index-Tribune" has entered upon a new volume—its ninth. Under the management of Mr. H. H. Granice, the present editor and proprietor, the "Index-Tribune" is a good local paper, and is earnestly laboring for the best interests of the town and valley in which it is published. It should receive a good support.—[S. R. Democrat.

Hop-growers of the upper end of the county, in view of the rise in price of hops, and to encourage white labor, propose to raise the pay of pickers from 70 cents to $1 per hundred. Hop raising promises to prove a profitable business this season, as there is a failure in the crop on the Atlantic coast that has already caused a rise in price from seven to twenty-five cents per pound.

Bon-Bon Surprise Party.

The bon-bon surprise party given at Union Hall, in honor of Miss Etta Raschen on the evening of the nineteenth anniversary of her birth, Friday, July 23d, by her friends of Sonoma and vicinity, was an exceedingly pleasant affair. The hall was well filled with handsome ladies and gallant beaux, who "tripped the light fantastic" till the "peep o' day" on Saturday morn, interrupted only by an intermission of an hour, to permit the gay participants to partake of one of the finest ball suppers ever served in the City of Sonoma. The music was furnished by G. Giradi of San Francisco. The occasion will be long remembered and reverted to by the gay participants as one of the most pleasant social assemblies of the past, reflecting credit upon the committee of ladies and gentlemen having charge of the arrangements, and affording unalloyed pleasure to all who were so fortunate as to be present throughout the evening. Following are the names of the ladies and gentlemen participating in the festivities: Mr. and Mrs. H. Raschen, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Green. Mesdames A. Raschen, Bolger, DeScalso, Perry. The Misses Etta Raschen, Annie Raschen, Heloise Pauli, Rose Wilson, Rose Levy, Harriet Ehrlich, Emily Ehrlich, Arvilla Cheney, Susie Cheney, Ella McIntyre, Kate Green, Emma Euslow, Mary McHarvey, Bertie Sydner, Minnie Calloway, Grace Johnson, Cora Perkins, Octavia Copeland, Cullen. Messrs. F. Ehrlich, E. J. Mullin, Jesse Burris, Fred Duhring, Jr., Frank Patton, G. H. Hotz, Otto Ehrlich, Fred Ehrlich, Sam Lewis, Wm. Carriger, J. B. McMahan, Wm. Seipp, Wehr, Lew Green, Emil Pauli, Thomas R. Glynn, Alf McLaughlin, Chas. Douglass, Lucian Johnson, Chas. Fontana, Wm. Wilson, Hugh Jones, Fred Ewell, Ed Ewell, Geo. Skaggs, M. F. Turley, J. J. New Paper in Lake County.

The "Lower Lake Press," a new candidate for public favor, published in Lower Lake, Lake county, of date July 24, 1886, with J. B. Baccus, Jr., editor and proprietor, came to hand this week. Though a new publication the proprietor is not a new man in that locality, having had fourteen years experience in the newspaper business in Lake county. Politically the journal espouses the cause of the Democratic party, and judging by the ability displayed in the editorial columns in handling such subjects as are treated therein, he has the ability to take the lead of his conferees and become the organ of the party in the county. The paper is a folio seven columns to the page, neatly printed, makes a respectable show of advertising patronage and miscellaneous reading. We wish Bro. Baccus success in his new business venture.

A Home Market for Home Products.

It seems to us that the farmers around Sonoma, who make a business of raising fruits for market, would find their interests enhanced by encouraging a home market for the sale of their products, by way of showing to visitors the kinds of fruit that are produced upon their lands, instead of allowing the town to do without such articles, or force the merchants to buy in San Francisco the same classs of products and freight them here to be sold at a profit after paying freight and commissions. A fruit and vegetable store here, supplied with articles produced in this valley, in addition to domestic products from other sections, would undoubtedly do a lively business, and besides supplying consumers with much-needed articles at fair prices, would result in a benefit to all interested in the prosperity of the valley.

Clay Literary Society.

The exercises at the Clay Literary Society meeting on Monday evening last, was unusually entertaining and instructive, the programme being tastily arranged and artistically rendered. The attendance was large, the room being completely packed, and every one present seemed to appreciate and enjoy the entertainment to the fullest extent. The Society is in a flourishing condition financially, with a constantly increasing membership, and bids fair to become a permanent social organization and a lasting benefit to the young people of the Sonoma Valley.

New Enterprise.

An enterprising capitalist of Sonoma, in view of frequent unsatisfied demands for dwelling houses to rent by persons desirous of locating here to enter into business, has purchased the land fronting Napa street, west of the Plaza, and will shortly erect thereon a row of eight cottages, to rent at reasonable rates.

A Wise Reform.

The habit of administering quinine in powerful doses, as an antidote to malarial maladies, was once dangerously common. Happily this practice has undergone a wide reform. Not only the public, but professional men have adopted, not wholly, of course, but largely, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe botanic substitute for the pernicious alkaloid. The consequences of this change are most important. Now fever and ague sufferers are cured—formerly their complaints were only for the time relieved, or half cured—the remedy eventually failing to produce any appreciable effect, except the doses were increased. A course of the Bitters, persistently followed, breaks up the worst attacks and prevents their return. The evidence in favor of this storling specific and household medicine is of an ambiguous character, but positive and satisfactory, and the sales wherever it is used are very numerous.

Important to Valley Farmers.

Messrs. G. N. Whitaker and E. A. Rogers, members of a committee of Sonoma County Grange, called upon us this week. These gentlemen are canvassing this valley for the purpose of inducing the farmers to forward contributions of products of the farms, orchards and vineyards to the Sonoma County Grange Headquarters of the G. A. R., care of G. N. Newell, San Francisco. It is very important that the Sonoma Valley and the county at large should be fully represented at this exposition, that eastern visitors may have an opportunity of seeing the quality of our products, that the high reputation Sonoma has abroad as a fruit-growing region may be sustained.

Artesian Well.

Dr. Lawrence is preparing to bore an artesian well on his residence property at a suitable elevation, should he succeed in getting a flowing stream, to supply the city with water, with sufficient pressure to raise the water to the top of the tallest buildings in town. Surrounding the site of the well are numerous springs, in which the water rises to the surface, and the enterprising Doctor hopes, at a reasonable depth, to strike a flowing stream of pure soft water in quantity sufficient to meet the requirements of the people of the town for domestic purposes, which can be stored in tanks or reservoirs at sufficient elevation to be useful in quenching fires in buildings, should any occur.

The Vintage.

The San Francisco "Bulletin" of a late date makes the following statement in accordance with reports received at the office of the State Viticultural Commissioner: "The California wine crop of this year will not be over 16,000,000 gallons. When the season opened the indications were favorable for a large yield, but the recent hot weather has caused so much damage as to reduce the yield very materially. The greatest damage was done in the Napa and Santa Clara Valleys, while Sonoma and Alameda counties also have a small yield."

The Opium Habit.

The Santa Rosa "Democrat," in a late issue, bewails the demoralization of the youth of that city by contact with the Chinese, and cites the fact that "young men of twenty years of age or thereabouts" make a practice of visiting Chinese dens for the purpose of indulging in use of the poisonous drug. It is bad, truly, but it seems that, like all other bad habits adopted by the human race, the opium habit must run its course, though the experience of its votaries is a most unhappy one and few there are who have lived to announce their reformation.

The G. A. R.

The number of members of the G. A. R. of California Posts reported for duty in the procession on Tuesday next is stated to be 3,000, to which will be added upwards of 20,000 in the grand procession on that day. Such sights as will be presented in the streets of San Francisco next Tuesday are seldom seen, and will draw thousands of spectators from all parts of the Coast to witness the grand pageant.

The Border Troubles.

The troubles on the Rio Grande border seem to be increasing. Editor Cutting still languishes in a Mexican dungeon in El Paso del Norte, and Mexican troops are being concentrated there in large bodies to prevent rescue by citizens or an American force from the Texas side. Excitement runs high on both sides of the river, and unless the question of legality of editor Cutting's arrest and imprisonment is promptly settled there will probably be much trouble and perhaps a border war inaugurated. In the meantime, rumors of revolutions, and outrages committed upon the ranches and towns in the Mexican border states add to the general excitement and inflame public sentiment in both countries to a degree verging on to actual war, and prominent Mexicans are moving across the river into Texas with their property to avoid the dangers menacing life and property in their own country.

Prospects appear favorable for the election of a Senator to succeed Mr. Hearst on Tuesday next.

The grape crop of this valley is represented to be light, though the prospect is favorable for grapes of a superior quality.

Laurie Spencer and three companions from the valley, returned Thursday night from a month's camping tour in the mountains of Lake county.

A Frenchman was found dead in his room in a San Jose hotel, on the 27th inst., death having been caused by asphyxiation, he having blown out the gas on retiring to bed.

A convict named Frank Hamilton made his escape from the State prison on Wednesday last, and Warden McComb has offered a reward of $50 for his capture.

A Determined Self-Destructionist.

MERCED, Cal., July 26th.—A man came to town Saturday and registered at the Tuolumne Hotel as E. B. Trainor of Calistoga. He stayed around the hotel all day yesterday, but to-day did not come to his meals. About two o'clock search was made for him and he was found in his room with his throat cut from ear to ear but not dead. He took two ounces of laudanum last night and then about four hours afterward cut his throat. Despondency was undoubtedly the cause of the rash act.

COAST NEWS.

C. H. Huffman intends erecting a brick, iron roof, fire-proof warehouse in the place of the one lately destroyed by fire. This will be a great improvement to that end of town, besides making the rate of insurance lighter for those who have grain stored there.—[Merced Argus.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER.

The great popularity of this preparation, after its test of many years, should be an assurance, even to the most skeptical, that it is really meritorious. Those who have used HALL'S HAIR RENEWER know that it does all that is claimed.

It causes new growth of hair on bald heads—provided the hair follicles are not dead, which is seldom the case; restores natural color to gray or faded hair; preserves the scalp healthful and clear of dandruff; prevents the hair falling off or changing color; keeps it soft, pliant, lustrous, and causes it to grow long and thick.

HALL'S HAIR RENEWER produces its effects by the healthful influence of its vegetable ingredients, which invigorate and rejuvenate. It is not a dye, and is a delightful article for toilet use. Containing no alcohol, it does not evaporate quickly and dry up the natural oil, leaving the hair harsh and brittle, as do other preparations.

Buckingham's Dye FOR THE WHISKERS

Colors them brown or black, as desired, and is the best dye, because it is harmless; produces a permanent natural color; and, being a single preparation, is more convenient of application than any other.

Joaquin Murieta's Secrets Revealed.

[San Jose Mercury.]

About two years ago a Mexican named Abelardo Mendoza, a noted horse-thief, was shot and mortally wounded in Cholame valley by a Kern county Constable. Before he died Mendoza made a full confession of his many crimes, stating among other things that he had, during the last year of Joaquin Murieta's life, been a member of that noted highwayman's band of desperadoes. He also imparted the information that Joaquin had buried a goodly portion of his stolen treasure in the hills of Santa Barbara county, but died before he could accurately locate the spot. Thousands upon thousands of dollars captured by Joaquin from the miners were never satisfactorily accounted for even by the bandit's extravagance and the reprisals that were frequently made upon him and his band by the officers. It was, therefore, the general belief after his death that large sums had been buried at different places in California hills. Many fruitless attempts to unearth a part of the hidden treasure have been made in late years in the Cantua canyon, near the New Idria mines, a favorite hiding place and camp of the bandit and also of his successor, Tiburcio Vasquez. Within the last month, however, a clew has been afforded, which may result in something "tangible" as the Irishman has it.

A few weeks ago Sheriff Branham took to San Quentin a Mexican who had been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. On the way to the prison he told the following extraordinary story, which in many respects is corroborative of the statements made by Mendoza in 1884: "I was in Santa Barbara," he said, "in 1883, and there I fell in with Abelardo Mendoza. We became intimate, and one day when he had been drinking a little too much he said that he knew where there was a mint of money. I pressed him for particulars, but for a time he would not tell me any more. Whisky finally opened his heart and he said that when Joaquin Murieta left for the Tulare plains—a trip that resulted in his death at the hands of Harry Love—he (Mendoza) was left behind, being ill with a fever. Before Joaquin left these instructions with him: 'At such and such a place,' he said, 'is a plant of gold and jewelry; if I am killed it belongs to my son. When you are certain of my death, find my son and place the plunder in the hands of those who will care for it for him, but on no account touch the treasure to benefit yourself. If you do I will have the devil come on earth, cut your ears off, pull out your tongue and fling you into the sea to be eaten up by the sharks.' After exacting a terrible oath that the instructions would be faithfully carried out, Murieta left him forever. When Mendoza got well he tried to find his dead leader's son, but without success. In 1860 he wandered into Texas, and while there got into a difficulty and was sent to the Penitentiary for twenty years. After his release he came to California and up to 1880 made three trips into Santa Barbara county for the purpose of looking up the hidden treasure. But his heart failed him miles from the spot on every occasion. Of a superstitious nature he feared that if he disregarded Murieta's injunction he would be gobbled up by the devil. I tried to convince him that Murieta dead was powerless to do him harm, and at last he consented to make a trip to the place in my company. Two days afterwards we set out. We traveled along the stage road for some twenty miles in a southerly direction until we came to a point of the mountain. Here we turned off and took a dim trail that led up the coast side through the brush for about half a mile, until we came in sight of three white rocks near the summit of the ridge. From these rocks we crossed directly over to the eastern side, then descended the hill a short distance until we came to a spring. Looking then to the south we saw three oak trees, standing in a line and about twenty-five yards apart. We went to the trees and at the bottom of the first, about three feet under-ground found a box, with the hinges all rusted, containing a collection of pistols, knives, spurs, etc. Under the second tree, between two roots we unearthed another box filled with jewelry, gold nuggets and $50 slugs. We took away $1,000, intending to come back when the money was spent. Mendoza swore that he would never go back to the place without me, and I think he kept his word. I went back last spring [illegible] and took away $1,500 more. [illegible] 5,000 left, [illegible] shall never leave San Quentin alive." The Sheriff took down the description of the spot which tallies in most respects with the one above given, and may sometime take a trip of investigation.

Pine Pollen Mistaken for Sulphur.

[Truckee Republican, July 17.]

Yesterday morning, says the Carson Appeal of last Wednesday, the State Prison was visited by a deluge of rain and the heaviest part of the thunder storm. In the morning the officers of the prison were astonished to find the ground covered with sulphur, left after the rain had dried or soaked into the ground. The deposit varied from one-sixteenth of an inch to an inch and one-half thick, and was everywhere. It was swept off the sidewalk like snow, and was also found in quantities on the roof. Quite a number of parties went out to the prison yesterday to verify the story, and all were satisfied that it was sulphur. The explanation of the phenomenon is that a water-spout scooped up the sulphur from some lake and deposited it at the prison. The same phenomenon has been witnessed here frequently. Instead, however, of the material being sulphur, it is nothing except the pollen from pine trees. This fine fertilizing substance is present in the atmosphere at this time of the year, and is frequently borne by the winds for a long distance. Of course a heavy shower will precipitate it, sometimes in large quantities. Last Wednesday the surface of Donner Lake was covered with it. Although resembling sulphur, it is strange that any person should mistake it for that substance. Carsonites will know what sulphur is one of these dare.

Robbed His Baby.

[Sacramento Bee.]

A prominent Butte county politician, who is down attending the "extra," was asked about the reported capture of W. J. Morgan, the absconding Treasurer. He said that Morgan was in Missouri and that every movement he made was watched by one of Henry Morse's detectives. Requisition papers were forwarded two weeks ago, and the stalwart form of the once popular Morgan is likely to come up in this locality very soon.

"Billy Morgan and I were the warmest friends," said the visitor from Butte, "but he has turned out so badly that I have formed a perfect disgust for him. The people here have just learned that [illegible] a greater villian than they imagined. He has a sweet little girl, three or four years old, who was everybody's pet. Her friends lavished upon her their spare nickels, dimes and quarters, which her father placed in a leather handbag and put in the county vault for safe keeping. The child had accumulated $27 in silver. When Morgan stole $15,000 from the county he was not satisfied, and broke open his baby's box and extracted $25. I have heard of men stealing coppers from a dead nigger's eyes and of taking acrons from a blind pig, but the rascally Morgan has done a worse thing, and should be ridden on a rail."

Canned and Dried Fruit.

The New York Commercial Bulletin of the 18th instant says: California canned and dried fruits are rapidly coming into favor with consumers in the East, and the trade here naturally watch all advices from that section that have a bearing on that subject. From information received it appears that lower rates of freight will enable Eastern dealers to lay the same down here at a trifle below the cost of last season. Earlier in the year the expectations were that the prices of this season would rule low, but the large quantity of fruit which dropped from the trees, and the increased facilities offered by the railroads combined, served to advance values for canning purposes 50 and 100 per cent over the opening prices. The California raisin crop will probably be double that of last year, and of greatly improved quality. Packers there are rapidly improving their methods, and each year witnesses some progress toward a closer competition with the quality of Mediterranean fruit. The prospects for a large yield of honey on the Pacific coast are very favorable, which fact means a low price for the article in this locality.

An Old Paper.

[San Jose Mercury.]

C. Sproat, the electrician and manager of the Telephone Company, has left at this office for inspection a copy of the Ulster County Gazette, published at Kingston, N. Y., of Saturday, January 4, 1800. It is in an excellent state of preservation and contains much interesting matter. An account of the funeral of George Washington is given, together with the proceedings of Congress in the matter of the ex-President's death.

Geo. D. Wetherill & Co. WHITE LEAD and PAINT MANUFACTURERS, 56 North Front St. PHILAD'A, PA.

This Wash Board is made of ONE SOLID SHEET OF HEAVY CORRUGATED ZINC, which produces a double-faced board of the best quality and durability. The fitting is very deep, holding more water, and consequently doing better washing than any wash board in the market. The frame is made of hard wood, [illegible] together with the iron bolt running through a tube formed on the lower edge of the ridges, thus binding the whole together in the most substantial manner and producing a wash board which for economy, excellence and durability is unquestionably the best in the world. We find so many dealers that object to our boards on account of its DURABILITY, saying "It will last too long, we can never sell a customer but one." We take this means to advise consumers to INSIST upon having the NORTH STAR WASH BOARD. THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.

Manufactured by PFANSCHMIDT, DODGE & CO., 248 & 250 West Polk St., Chicago, Ill.
